Ban on direct flights to Cuba lifted

HAVANA — Hundreds of waving, screaming Cubans greeted a chartered Boeing jetliner carrying 203 passengers to Havana on Wednesday as the United States resumed direct flights to Cuba for the first time in two years.

Relatives and friends crowded in and around the Havana airport terminal to meet the passengers, many of whom they had not seen since the direct flights were canceled in 1996.

The visitors, who each paid $399 for a round-trip ticket, waved at the crowd and rushed through Cuban customs with packages of vitamins and basic medicines such as Tylenol and Motrin.

Miami's Airline Brokers Co. Inc. — also known as ABC Charters — made the first trip.

Also approved were seven small charter companies, along with American Airlines.

President Clinton canceled direct flights in 1996 to punish the Cuban government for shooting down two unarmed civilian aircraft.

SPRINGFIELD, Va. — Nguyen Ngoc Loan, the South Vietnamese general whose summary execution of a bound prisoner was depicted in a photograph that stunned the world three decades ago, has died. He was 67.

Loan died Tuesday evening at his home in Burke, a suburb of Washington, D.C., after a battle with cancer, said his daughter, Nguyen Anh.

At the time of the shooting, Loan was head of South Vietnam's national police.

Firefights had broken out all over Saigon and Loan's police were trying to rid the South Vietnamese capital of Viet Cong guerrillas.

Shortly after Adams and other newsmen arrived, Loan led the prisoner, whose hands were bound, onto a street corner, pulled his handgun and shot him in the head. The general told the newsmen that the prisoner was a known Viet Cong captain.

Loan fled South Vietnam in 1975 when Communists overran the country, and moved to northern Virginia. He opened a restaurant in Dale City, Va., in the late '70s.

U.N. employee killed by burglars

TBILISI, Georgia — A Polish woman working for the United Nations in Georgia was shot to death at the entrance of her apartment in the capital, officials said Wednesday.

The U.N. worker, Maria Magdalena Wewiorska, 31, was shot at point-blank range on Tuesday evening, said Maya Musidze, a spokeswoman for the Georgian Interior Ministry.

The killing was not believed to be political, Deputy Interior Minister Demuri Murguliya said. Investigators believe that Wewiorska, a secretary for the head of the U.N. mission in Georgia, apparently came home and startled burglars, Murguliya said.

Also, eight civilians were killed when their horse-drawn cart hit a land mine in Abkhazia, a breakaway province from Georgia, news reports said. Abkhazian officials blamed pro-government militants in the separatist region, the Interfax news agency reported.

Olympic profits could go to towns

SALT LAKE CITY — The state's Olympic representative wants lawmakers to put some of the projected windfall from the 2002 Winter Olympics toward helping localities cope with the burden of providing services for the Games.

Utah Olympic Officer John Fowler said the state should take in more than $47 million, plus another $23 million in school funds. Fowler urged a legislative committee to use some of that money to assist local governments facing expenses in public safety and other areas.

It will cost the state government about $28 million to handle increased demands for services resulting from the Games, Fowler said Tuesday in his first report to lawmakers.

It is unknown how much the city will spend on the Games, but city officials have said virtually every area of government will be affected.

Small communities in the Heber Valley could be less capable of dealing with the events and may be hit even harder than Salt Lake City.

Scripture of the Day

"Wherefore, ye must press forward with a steadfastness in Christ, having a perfect brightness of hope, and a love of God and of all men. Wherefore, if ye shall press forward, feasting upon the word of Christ, and endure to the end, behold, thus saith the Father: Ye shall have eternal life."
— 2 Nephi 31:20

Curtis Huffmire likes this scripture because "it basically summarizes all we have to do after baptism to return to our Heavenly Father." Huffmire is a senior from Cypress, Calif., majoring in mechanical engineering.

Bill would sticker salvaged cars

Autos involved in wrecks often resold without telling buyers of vehicles' histories

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At more than $20,000, the used Jeep Cherokee didn't come cheap. But it had a truckload of options and less than 12,000 miles on the odometer, so Warren Hill thought he was getting a fair shake when he bought the 1991 vehicle from a used car dealer in 1992.

He was wrong.

When Hill, an employee at the National Arboretum, went to trade in his Jeep two years later, another car dealer told him something surprising: The vehicle had previously been in a major accident. Hidden behind the white paint and beige interior were a damaged frame, body parts of unmatched colors and a $6,000 repair job riddled with missing welds.

"We don't want it, it's worthless," Hill remembers the dealer saying.

Experiences like this are behind a move on Capitol Hill to crack down on the sale of salvaged cars to unsuspecting buyers. Like Hill's, some were crashed and repaired. Others were damaged by floods or other natural disasters.

The House approved a bill last fall to warn buyers when a car has been repaired after suffering major damage. The Senate is expected to do the same in the next few weeks, all in the name of protecting consumers.

Consumer groups don't like the bill, nor do 38 state attorneys general. They accuse Congress of supporting legislation that would actually exempt most used cars from the proposed rules, a potential boon to auto dealers and insurers.

"It's one of those Orwellian double-speak kinds of bills," said Rosemary Shahan, president of Consumers for Auto Reliability and Safety in Sacramento, Calif. "Heaven help us from friends like this."

Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller said the legislation "is being sold as a pro-consumer bill, but this bill is a wolf in sheep's clothing."

Currently, there is no national standard for reselling salvaged cars. States have an array of regulations, ranging from no rules to strict ones such as Iowa's. Used cars there must be declared "salvaged" if they had repairs costing more than 50 percent of their value before being damaged.

The differing rules allow unscrupulous sellers to move from state to state, re-registering damaged cars in lenient states. The attorneys general estimate the sales have cost consumers and other unsuspecting buyers $4 billion in inflated sticker prices.

"The number of victims in the rebuilt salvage vehicle industry is growing and it must be stopped," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said when he introduced his bill, which now has 47 co-sponsors.

But the measure does not apply to all vehicles. Damaged cars must have to be less than seven years old to qualify for a "salvage" label. Older than that would be worth more than $7,500. The vehicles then would have been declared to an insurance company or repairs worth more than 80 percent of their value before being damaged.

Dr. Kevin J. Worthen
BYU Professor of Law

Professor Kevin Worthen teaches courses in state and local government, legislation, and federal Indian law in the J. Reuben Clark Law School. A Carbon County native, Dr. Worthen served a mission to Mexico and earned an associate degree at the College of Eastern Utah, where he was co-captain of the basketball team and valedictorian. He then earned his BA in political science and his juris doctorate from BYU.

Following law school graduation, Professor Worthen spent two years in Washington, D.C., serving as law clerk first to Judge Malcolm R. Wilkey of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit and then to Justice Byron R. White of the U.S. Supreme Court. Following three years of private practice with the law firm of Jennings, Strouss, & Salmon in Phoenix, Arizona, he joined the BYU law school faculty in 1987.

In 1994 Professor Worthen was a Fulbright scholar at the University of Chile in Santiago, where he taught and did research on the rights of indigenous people in the Americas. He has served as a consultant to the Utah State Legislative Task Force on Tort Law Reform and is currently a member of the Utah State Constitution Revision Commission.

Brother Worthen has served as a bishop's counselor, Young Men president, seminary instructor, and in two high councils. He and his wife, the former Peggy Seale, are the parents of two sons and a daughter.

Women take part in bone study

Michael Brandy/Universe

Woolley, professor of Food Science and Nutrition, is conducting a bone-density study to help women prevent osteoporosis. The test measures bone mineral content in women.

By PAMELA JO GRUNDTVIG
pamela@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

A bone density study to help women prevent osteoporosis in their early 20s is being conducted on BYU campus.

The study calls for 200 healthy women ages 18 to 24 to participate in the study.

The study is being led by Food Science and Nutrition professor Bruce Woolley and carried out by research assistant Ken Hunt, a 22-year-old senior from Claremont, Calif., majoring in nutritional science.

Hunt said all young women are building bone mass between ages 27 and 30. After bone mass peaks, women will lose bone mass on the average of about 1.2 percent per year. After this peak time, there is no stopping or gaining bone mass.

"Our theory is that maximizing bone density in young women in their 20s is going to decrease incidents in osteoporosis," Hunt said.

Osteoporosis is a weakening or softening of the bone that typically occurs after menopause in women.

"Osteoporosis is a significant disease among the women in the United States, and it is increasing," Woolley said.

The study being conducted is composed of two phases.

Phase I consists of a 10-minute lab and 20-minute questionnaire. The lab work includes a heel X-ray, or Bone Density Test that measures bone mineral content, in addition to a height, weight and body fat measurement.

Phase II is year-long time period where supplements of calcium, magnesium, or a placebo are administered to women who qualify from Phase I.

Rachel Gray, a 23-year-old senior from Atlanta, Ga., majoring in psychology, participated in the study and said it was simple to understand.

"The study was very quick and very informative," Gray said. "They take the time to give you a free consultation. They are not just worried about getting the data. They are interested in you."

The study told Gray that her bone density was very good, and that she is not at risk for osteoporosis if she keeps exercising and eating the right foods. However, if she were to change some of her health habits she could be at risk for osteoporosis later in life.

Women interested in participating in the study can reach Hunt at 378-9265 or sign up for testing between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays in S-277 ESC. Pregnant women are not eligible to participate in the study.

Card aids student fun, funds

By PAMELA JO GRUNDTVIG
pamela@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Activities like biking, theater-going and hydra-tubing are some of the activities BYU students can take advantage of before the summer ends.

Cards offered to BYU students on the free BYUSA Program cards give students an opportunity to enjoy the recreational activities at affordable rates.

Activities include, Sundance, The Rock Garden, Raging River, Lake Powell, Tracy Aviary, CLAS Ropes Course and many other attractions are offering discounts on recreational activities to BYU students who have an Expanse card.

These cards could encourage people to go see these attractions all over the state, said Susan Dayley, a 20-year-old sophomore from Provo majoring in history.

The cards are available to students with a current BYU I.D. card. The 1998-1999 Expanse Program has been launched by BYUSA to provide students with discounts on recreational activities and to patronage local businesses.

BYUSA would like students to take advantage of great activities at lower prices.

"The card provides a means by which students can afford quality activities," BYUSA Campus Activities Director Michael Pittman said.

Tony Allen, a 21-year-old junior from Midvale majoring in math and physics, had never seen the card before, but said he would use it to save money.

"You are always thinking of things to do on dates, and this card has a lot of cool things on it," he said.

When asked if he would use the card, Daniel A. Ward, a 22-year-old sophomore from Longview, Texas, majoring in general studies, said, "As students, we cannot afford to go to all these places all of the time, so this card is useful when we can go."

The cards are available in 3400 ELWC and around campus. Students seeking a card or information can go to a booth in the Harold B. Lee Library today and Friday between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Police Beat

STRANDED PERSON

A 21-year-old white male who was stranded in a car on the south side of the Harold B. Lee Library was rescued by police. The male was found by police after he was stranded in the car for several hours. He was taken to the hospital and is now recovering.

140 pounds, blue eyes and blond hair.

THEFT

Between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. July 8, a Canon Rebel X camera was stolen from outside a dark room in the George H. Brimhall Building. The victim, a juvenile visitor, left her camera and bag outside of the room while she was attending a class. The camera is valued at $300.

A male student servicing computers in the N. Eldon Tanner Building library was a victim of theft July 9 at 1:30 p.m. He left his hand-held palm Pilot computer on a table, and when he returned it was gone. Only one other person was seen in the area. The suspect is described as a 5'10" blond-haired white male between the ages of 18 and 25.

SUSPICIOUS CONDUCT

At 7 p.m. on July 10, a custodian witnessed a male carrying a computer monitor out of the Talmage Building Room 167. She questioned the male, who said he was helping a professor. The situation is under investigation.

Summer thefts increase in the summer

Summer months are the best time for bicycle thefts on campus. In the last 10 to 15 thefts reported, the biggest problem and probably the number one stolen from campus," said of the University Police, about 50 to 60 thefts per year.

Gray, a 25-year-old senior from Provo, Calif., majoring in psychology, had her bike stolen from outside her apartment in 1992 from a house," she said. "I no one steals anything. My Schwinn Breeze was taken from outside my apartment; since then I always lock my bike."

Orem and Provo Police Departments also see an increase in thefts. Both departments average two to three bicycle thefts a day during the summer.

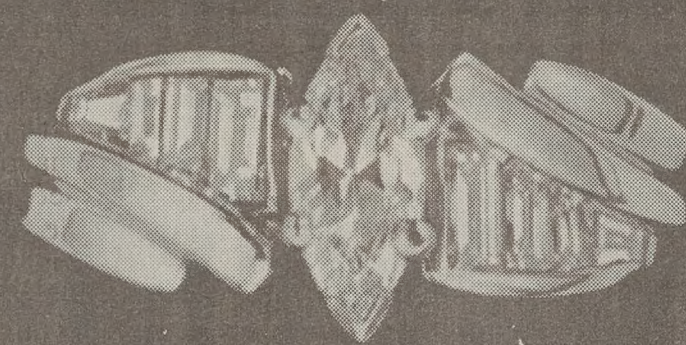

Students can take precautions to protect their bicycles from theft. Eyre said students need to register their bicycles through the traffic office. Registration costs $1 and is valid throughout the student's enrollment at BYU.

Students are also encouraged to lock their bikes at all times. Thirty-nine percent of the bicycles stolen from campus last year were not locked, Eyre said.

U-locks are the most effective locks on the market, according to University Police statistics. They found that 38 percent of the stolen bicycles had their locks cut, whereas only 10 percent of the bicycles stolen were locked with U-locks.

BYU couple dines and debuts

By JENNY STATHIS
jenny@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The sheer love of dining out inspired two BYU graduates to publish the restaurant review guide "A Taste of Utah County: A Guide to the Area's Best Restaurants."

The book, written by Amanda Bourne and husband Troy, includes a review of 54 restaurants from Lehi to Spanish Fork and out to Midway.

"She made me date her for, like, a million years, and she always made me take her out to dinner," Troy said. "We don't like doing the dishes, so we eat out at least a couple times a week," Amanda said. "When we realized that there wasn't a restaurant guide for this area, we decided that this would be the perfect place to try out our dream."

"We already had a good knowledge of the bulk of the restaurants and we tried to investigate the rest," Troy said.

The two began going out every night in order to keep the reviews updated and timely. They rated each restaurant in three categories on a scale from zero to 25, 25 being flawless. The categories include food, decor and service. Each review also includes a price range.

"We rated decor on the general ambience — surroundings, music, lighting, even type of ceiling," Troy said.

The table of contents includes a category index as well as cuisine and location index. The category index features food finds for "Best Bets for Vegetarians," "Most Unique" and "Open After 11 p.m.," to name a few. "We wanted people to be able to find the restaurant they wanted," Amanda said. "Things that people might not know about the restaurant — it's in there."

The reviews aren't exclusive to high-priced restaurants. They range from the most elegant to total dives.

"Anyone who has a mind to eat out can utilize the book to find the restaurant they're looking for," Troy said. "All of the restaurants we chose to review are worth going to. It depends on the appropriateness of the occasion and what you want in the restaurant."

"The point we're trying to get across is that you don't have to drive to Salt Lake to find a decent restaurant," Amanda said. "We put together a guide to the restaurants that we think are the best — the best this area has to offer."

The two said that they're not looking to make a huge profit off their sales.

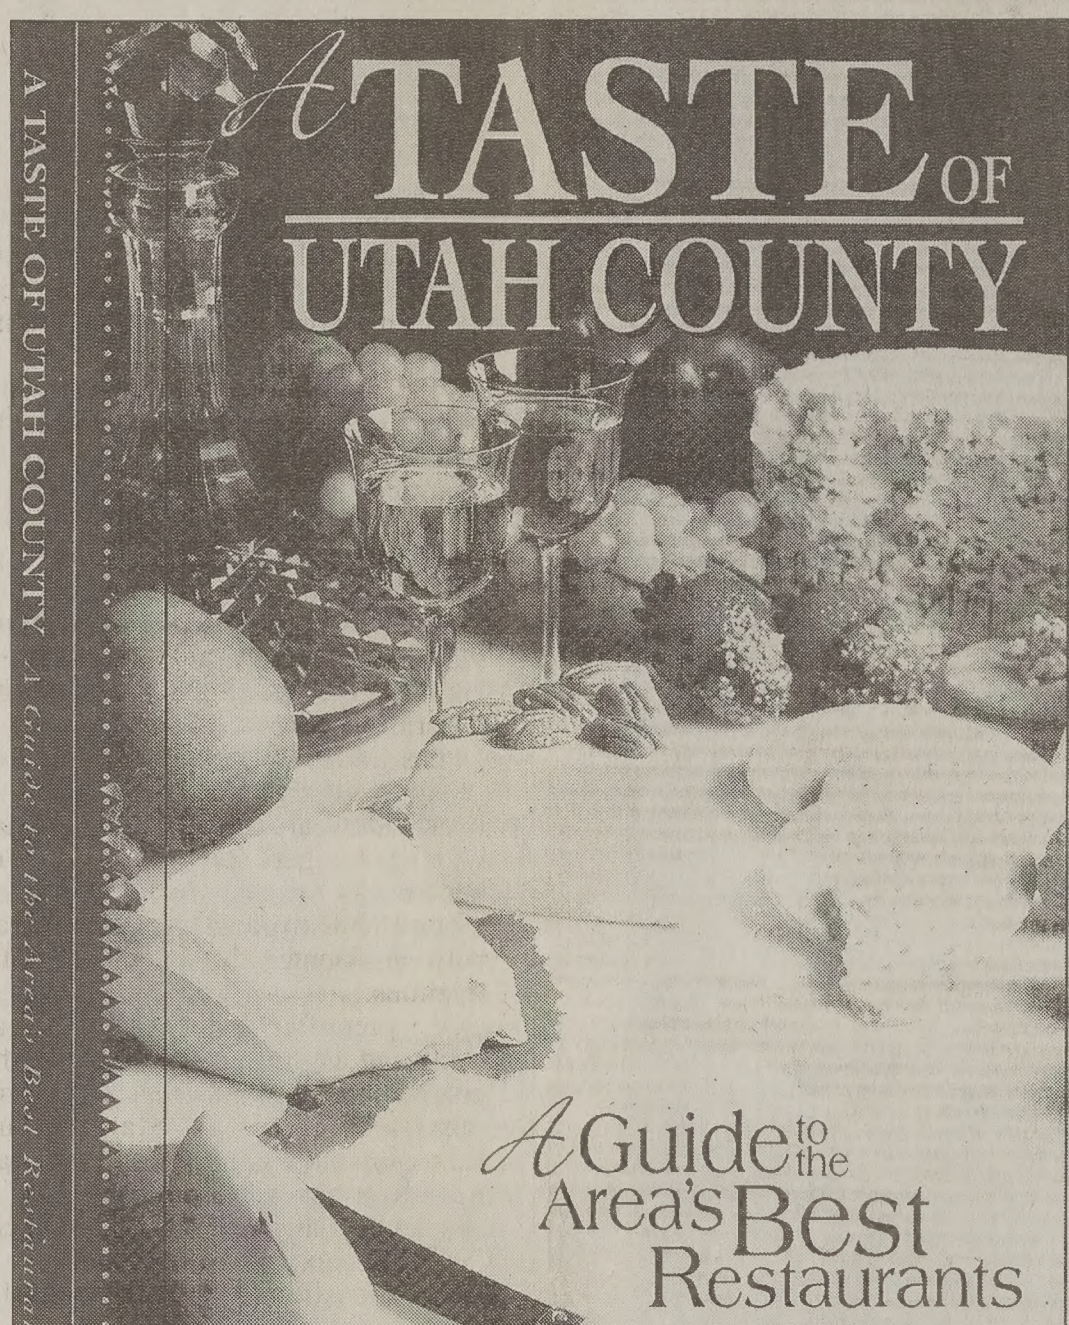

"It was definitely for fun. We're keeping our fingers crossed that we'll break even," Troy said.

"I've just always wanted to do a restaurant review," she said.

"And I've always wanted you to," he replied.

The BYU Bookstore will feature the review as Book of the Week at a 25 percent discount in the fall. Books are on sale in the Utah section of the Bookstore.

Dave Meehan, buyer for the general book department, said, "We chose to feature it because it looks like a great book that will appeal to the campus community."

Troy and Amanda Bourne wrote their first restaurant review "A Taste of Utah County: A Guide to the Area's Best Restaurants." The BYU Bookstore will feature the review as Book of the Week at a 25 percent discount this fall.

Snyder coaches Provo kids

BY WENDELL WOOD
wendell@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writer

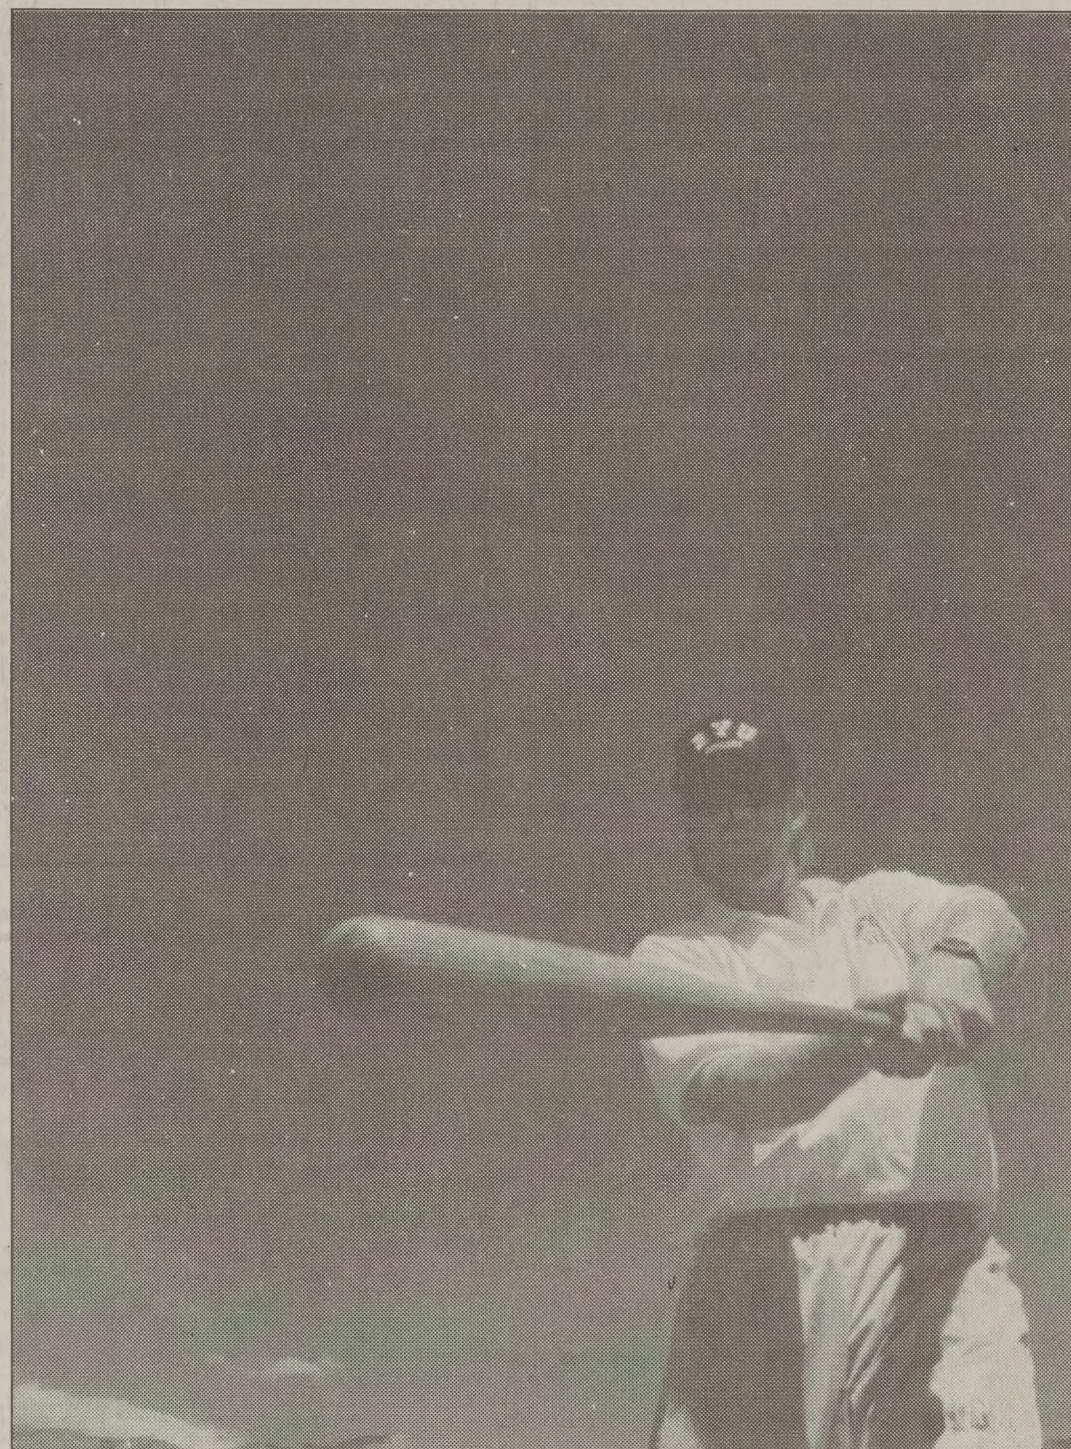

Is a silver medalist and former League All-Star doing in during the summer? He is what he loves. Former All-Star and Cleveland Indians pitcher Cory Snyder is back in Provo teaching children how to play baseball.

"I'm teaching the kids. I have a cage in my backyard at home and I teach them out of that," Snyder said.

Snyder, 37, from Inglewood, California, attended BYU on a baseball scholarship along with San Diego first baseman Wally Joyner and Minnesota Twins pitcher Rick Lue.

After graduating from BYU, Snyder was selected along with McGwire and other college players to represent the United States on the 1984 Olympic baseball team which won the silver medal in Los Angeles.

"It's probably one of the best experiences I've had," Snyder said. "It was a lot better than any in the big leagues. When you get to do something you love and do it for your family, there is nothing better than that."

Michael Brandy/Universe

Cory Snyder demonstrates the proper form for swinging a baseball bat. Snyder, a silver medalist and former Cleveland Indians All-Star, is back in Provo teaching children how to play baseball.

Snyder is married and has five children ages three, five, seven, eight and nine months old. Five-year-old son J.C. is helping his dad out with the teaching duties, while his eight-year-old sister is attending a gymnastics camp at BYU.

"We all drove out here in a big motor home," Snyder said. "I just wanted to get back up here, because the three years that I was up here at BYU were outstanding. They were great. I still have a lot of friends up here."

Snyder also said he enjoys playing golf in his spare time. With a two handicap, he has also thought about dedicating a little more time to develop his game. However, Snyder said he is looking to get out of the retail store business and try to devote more time to his family and coaching.

"I've been thinking about coaching maybe," Snyder said. "I'm going to talk to coach Pullins about maybe up here or coaching high school or something."

"I enjoy the high school level. I enjoy working with the kids," Snyder said. "Cory is a good guy," said former BYU athletic director Glen Tuckett. "He's great with people."

Albert gets well-deserved second chance

What kids, only 27, 642, 162, 630, 984, 273, 894, and 100,000 more days until the Jazz win their championship. Now for the record, in 10 months after his termination, Albert will return to the Jazz. Square Garden network to play play-by-play of New York Yankees. Of course, if the lock-out issues there may not be any broadcast.

Albert's surprise return was expected by everyone. Albert was only a member of time. Albert's second return to the Jazz was a surprise. The question was whether the public would forgive him.

broadcaster for NBC. He was recognized as one of the best in the business.

But above everything else, he was a good person, known to have good character and live a good lifestyle.

That image shattered last September when he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor assault charge in a sex case involving a long time lover. The charges we all wanted to believe were false turned out to be true. Albert's personal life was sick and twisted, and his career appeared to be over.

Albert's firing from NBC and the MSG network was immediate and justified. The public demanded punishment.

It reminds me of the recent problems certain members of the BYU football team have had with the law. One of the incidents involved a group of players who were pulled over in southern Utah for a traffic violation. The cop found marijuana and other drug paraphernalia in the car. They plead guilty to a lesser charge and were allowed to go.

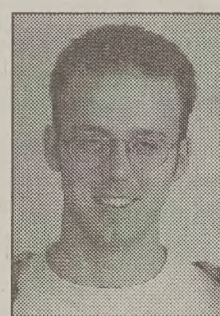

They players were grilled in the local papers for their actions and were disciplined by the Honor Code office for the offense. The thought I had is what if it had been me and my friends in that car.

What if my roommates and I were traveling through Cedar City when we were stopped for speeding. Upon inspection the cop found some joints and a bag of grass we hadn't rolled yet. We plead guilty to a lesser charge and are sent on our way.

Would any of the local papers care? Would the Honor Code Office even find out?

These are the issues surrounding the Albert case. He is a public figure and as such is subject to public scrutiny. He has suffered public humiliation and been the butt of numerous jokes. The time has come to forgive and let the man go on with his life.

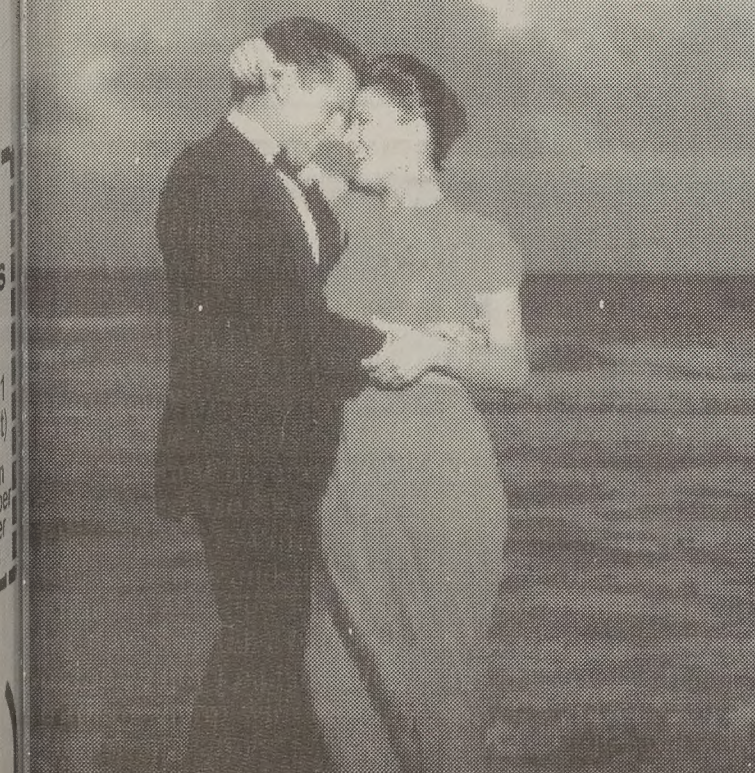

It's what all of us would want if we were in his shoes.

Two more NHL goalies sign free-agent deals

Associated Press

For weeks, the futures of Mike Richter and Curtis Joseph were intertwined, so it was only fitting that they chose jobs on the same day.

Richter, who never wanted to leave the New York Rangers, re-signed with them on Wednesday. Joseph, who was on the verge of signing with the Rangers to replace Richter, left the Edmonton Oilers for the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"There are a lot of opportunities, becoming a free agent," said Richter who signed a four-year, $21.8 million contract. "My objective was to stay where I was happy and where I have a chance to win a championship. That's here in New York."

Joseph, meanwhile, leaves the Oilers after three years in Edmonton. He was spectacular in helping the Oilers to first-round upsets against Dallas in 1996-97 and Colorado last season. He signed for $24 million over four years after talks broke off with the Rangers and allowed Richter back in.

For the Rangers, the difference between Richter and Joseph is public relations.

One year after Mark Messier left as a free agent, the Rangers faced the prospect of losing another key member from their 1994 Stanley Cup champion club. Current captain Brian Leetch, a close friend of Richter's, can become an unrestricted free agent following next season.

"If Mike didn't return it would be an uncomfortable situation," Leetch said. "I don't think anything would've been done on my contract situation in the near future."

Richter, who began his career in New York in the 1989 playoffs, came very close on Tuesday to signing with the Florida Panthers. He had rejected at least two other offers from the Rangers before he and general manager Neil Smith hammered out a deal.

"Mike Richter is as dedicated a Ranger as you can get," Smith said. Richter's contract does not include a no-trade clause, but for now he will remain with the only team he has played for in nine NHL seasons.

"In the end, if you achieved what you wanted to achieve, the path doesn't make a difference," Richter said. "I'm happiest here and New York felt that the fit was good. It worked out the best both ways."

Richter and Joseph were among three top free-agent goalies available on July 1. He was thought to be among the two best, along with Joseph, and a little ahead of former Rangers teammate John Vanbiesbrouck.

But when Vanbiesbrouck signed a three-year, $11 million deal last week with the Philadelphia Flyers — Richter's hometown team — Richter and Joseph lost leverage.

Richter, who was 21-31-15 with a 2.66 GAA last season, will turn 32 in September.

He won a place in Rangers' fans hearts by helping them win the Stanley Cup in 1994, the team's first in 54 years. In those playoffs, Richter went 16-7 with a 2.07 goals-against average.

Joseph was excited about coming home to Ontario.

"As a little boy I watched the Maple Leafs and dreamed about playing for Toronto and putting the sweater on," Joseph said.

S-T-E-A-M. powers teens to higher self-image

By SINA MATTHES
sina@du2.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

Orem Police have designed a program to help eighth-graders combat drug abuse and build self-esteem.

S-T-E-A-M., Self-esteem Training, Education and Mentoring, is a program developed by the Orem City Police. S-T-E-A-M. is based on the principles of D.A.R.E., the national anti-drug program implemented in elementary schools and taught by police officers.

"The purpose of the D.A.R.E. program is to teach principles that will allow kids to learn ways to deal with life and avoid abusing drugs," said Lt. Ned Jackson, director of S-T-E-A-M.

"So (in S-T-E-A-M.) we try to make them realize that they have self-worth," Jackson said.

"The kids still have to make the decision. We just give them ideas and ways to handle problems," said Randy Shepherd, an Orem police officer conducting the S-T-E-A-M training.

The officers use teamwork games and role-playing to help teenagers learn how to work in group situations.

"I feel that the program teaches them to learn to work in groups, to state their opinion, even when they're in groups," Shepherd said.

In a game called Shoot-Don't Shoot, the eighth-graders watch a video and are shown a crime situation where a split second decision is required.

They then take on the role of a police officer and must decide if they would shoot the criminal or not.

"Once you shoot, you can't say (to the bullet) 'oohh, wait, come back'," Jackson said.

The game teaches the consequences of making a split second decision without weighing the facts.

S-T-E-A-M. was used last year to help seventh-grade students.

"This is our second year. Last year we taught it in seventh-grade health classes.

"This year we've expanded it to a summer camp," Jackson said.

In the program's beginning stages, the officers are trying to evaluate what they like about the program and what needs to be improved.

"We've had great success with the program," Jackson said.

Jackson said there are 1,500 children in Orem's junior high schools.

He hopes at least 200 of them will go through the summer camp, and he hopes that, eventually, the program will expand.

S-T-E-A-M. is funded through donations from local businesses and through summer camp registration fees.

The camp is three hours per day for one week at the Orem City Center.

USU dairy farm monitors milk from cow to carton ring Utah's milk from the carton is now possible.

For the first time in the United States, a remote data acquisition system is linking dairy farms to a processor, went on-line at State University dairy farm. The system can monitor and report important operations in the milking parlor and send data to any remote location. It is now possible to monitor milk temperatures such as the temperature in the holding tank or performance of the cleaning system from your office computer," said Dr. Milan Shipka, director of the Caine Dairy Research Center.

The operations of the milking facility will be monitored using the data system equipment for a few months, and will be used to control the milking operations.

The Western Dairy Center, one of six national dairy food research centers funded by Dairy Management Inc., provided the funds for the installation of the data system equipment.

"Using these types of data systems on farms provides advantages to both the farmer and the milk processor," said Donald McMahon, director of the Western Dairy Center.

By using a data system the dairy farmer can always know whether the refrigeration cooling systems are on or off, and can monitor the temperature of the milk in the storage tank.

Apart from helping the farmer achieve better milk quality, monitoring the status of the milking parlor equipment allows pro-active servicing of refrigeration units and vacuum pumps.

"It may also save producers from having to dump milk because of refrigeration breakdowns and to milk being properly cooled," McMahon said.

There are also many advantages of using the data system equipment for milk processors.

"The most obvious advantage is that the data can be transferred to let each farm know the amount of milk that needs to be collected at each farm," McMahon said.

"The information can then be used to schedule tanker routes so that loads are maximized," McMahon said.

Michael Uttinger, director of Transweight Data Systems Ltd., who manufactured and installed the data system equipment at USU, said the missing link in this supply chain has always been the section from the cow to the factory.

"It is this pivotal link that (the data system) equipment can control and manage," Uttinger said.

"Monitoring milk temperatures and having that information connected to the milk processor's internal quality assurance program can help U.S. dairy companies meet international standards," Uttinger said.

Mexican official testifies of bribes

Associated Press

YORK — Mexico has named a former top national police official to tell a federal grand jury in the United States about drug bribes at the U.S. Mexican government. The New York Times reported Tuesday.

Police Director Adrian Fuentes told grand jurors in last month that he collected $1 million in payoffs in 1993 and turned the money over to his colleague, Mario Ruiz Massieu, two unidentified officials familiar with the testimony told the Times.

Ruiz Massieu was arrested in New Jersey three years ago. U.S. investigators said Carrera's testimony could be used to prosecute him or extradite him to Mexico.

U.S. officials are also hopeful that Carrera's testimony will convince Ruiz Massieu to testify about drug payoffs at high levels of the government of former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari.

An immigration judge dismissed deportation proceedings against Ruiz Massieu in May 1997.

The government is appealing that decision, and Ruiz Massieu remains under house arrest in New Jersey pending a decision, his lawyer, Cathy Fleming, said Wednesday.

U.S. officials said Mexico's decision to allow Carrera to testify in this country was probably most important for the precedent it sets for the two nations' relationship.

Carrera, 55, held senior posts in Mexico's prison system and police force during most of the six years

Salinas was president. Carrera also worked with Ruiz Massieu, who served twice as a deputy attorney general and who supervised federal police and anti-drug operations in 1994.

Carrera is the first witness to reach the United States from the upper ranks of the Mexican government under a new law that has modernized that country's justice system by allowing prosecutors to protect cooperative witnesses and plea-bargain with criminals.

Victim drowns in 3-inches of water

Associated Press

— A robbery victim in a 3-inch-deep puddle of water being knocked unconscious by police said a witness who said to go outside might have to save the victim's life turning him over.

The witness, Walter Tyler, said he and another man, who he said he saw two men hit the victim, 45, in the head and steal his cash and 21-inch mountain bike, police said. Paramedics found Chan dead in the puddle 10 minutes later.

Tyler, using hand gestures and notes, told The Miami Herald that he desperately tried twice to dial 911 on a telecommunications device for the deaf and could not get through.

The department said it checked its phone records for Tuesday and found no indication that Tyler called.

Tyler said he was afraid to go outside, and authorities said Tyler didn't realize how much danger Chan was in.

"If he had just turned this guy over, he probably wouldn't have drowned," Detective Delrish Moss said. "Our detectives spoke to him at length and he explained that he just didn't think of something as simple as that. He panicked."

Chan lived for free at the bakery where he worked. He sent most of the money he made to his wife and three children in Guatemala, said Miramar Bakery owner Margarita Ochoa.

"For a bicycle and a few little dollars he had, he is gone," Ms. Ochoa said. "You know what hurts the most? Thinking about his children and how those little creatures will suffer now that they are left without a father and without anything."

Heat wave cripples some Texans

Associated Press

AS — Health department officials were jammed Wednesday from people worried about the searing heat as Texas hit its 10th straight day of 100-temperature.

The heat wave has been blamed for deaths and for withering crops throughout the South. Callers to the Dallas County health department wanted to know how to avoid becoming a statistic.

"People need to take this heat seriously," said Betty Culbreath, director of Dallas County Health and Human Services.

"We just don't want to lose any more lives," she said.

The heat wave has stretched from Arizona into Colorado and east to Florida, but has been particularly deadly across the South. It is blamed for at least 25 deaths in Texas, six in Oklahoma and at least 20 in Louisiana since mid-May.

Many of those killed by the heat already had heart disease or another medical condition. Ten victims in Texas were older than 60, and all but four died in homes where air conditioners were broken or turned off.

Dillard's opens 275th store in Provo

By ALISON COTTE
alison@du2.byu.edu
 NewsNet Staff Writer

The first store in the Provo Towne Centre is ready to open, and it has hired 250 employees from the Utah County area.

Dillard's will open its doors to the public on August 1 and will celebrate with a grand opening on August 5.

"The early opening gives us the opportunity to introduce ourselves to the Provo-Orem area, tell them about Dillard's and also gives consumers an opportunity to catch the excitement of Dillard's opening and to revisit us when the mall opens," said Mel Ptacek, store manager.

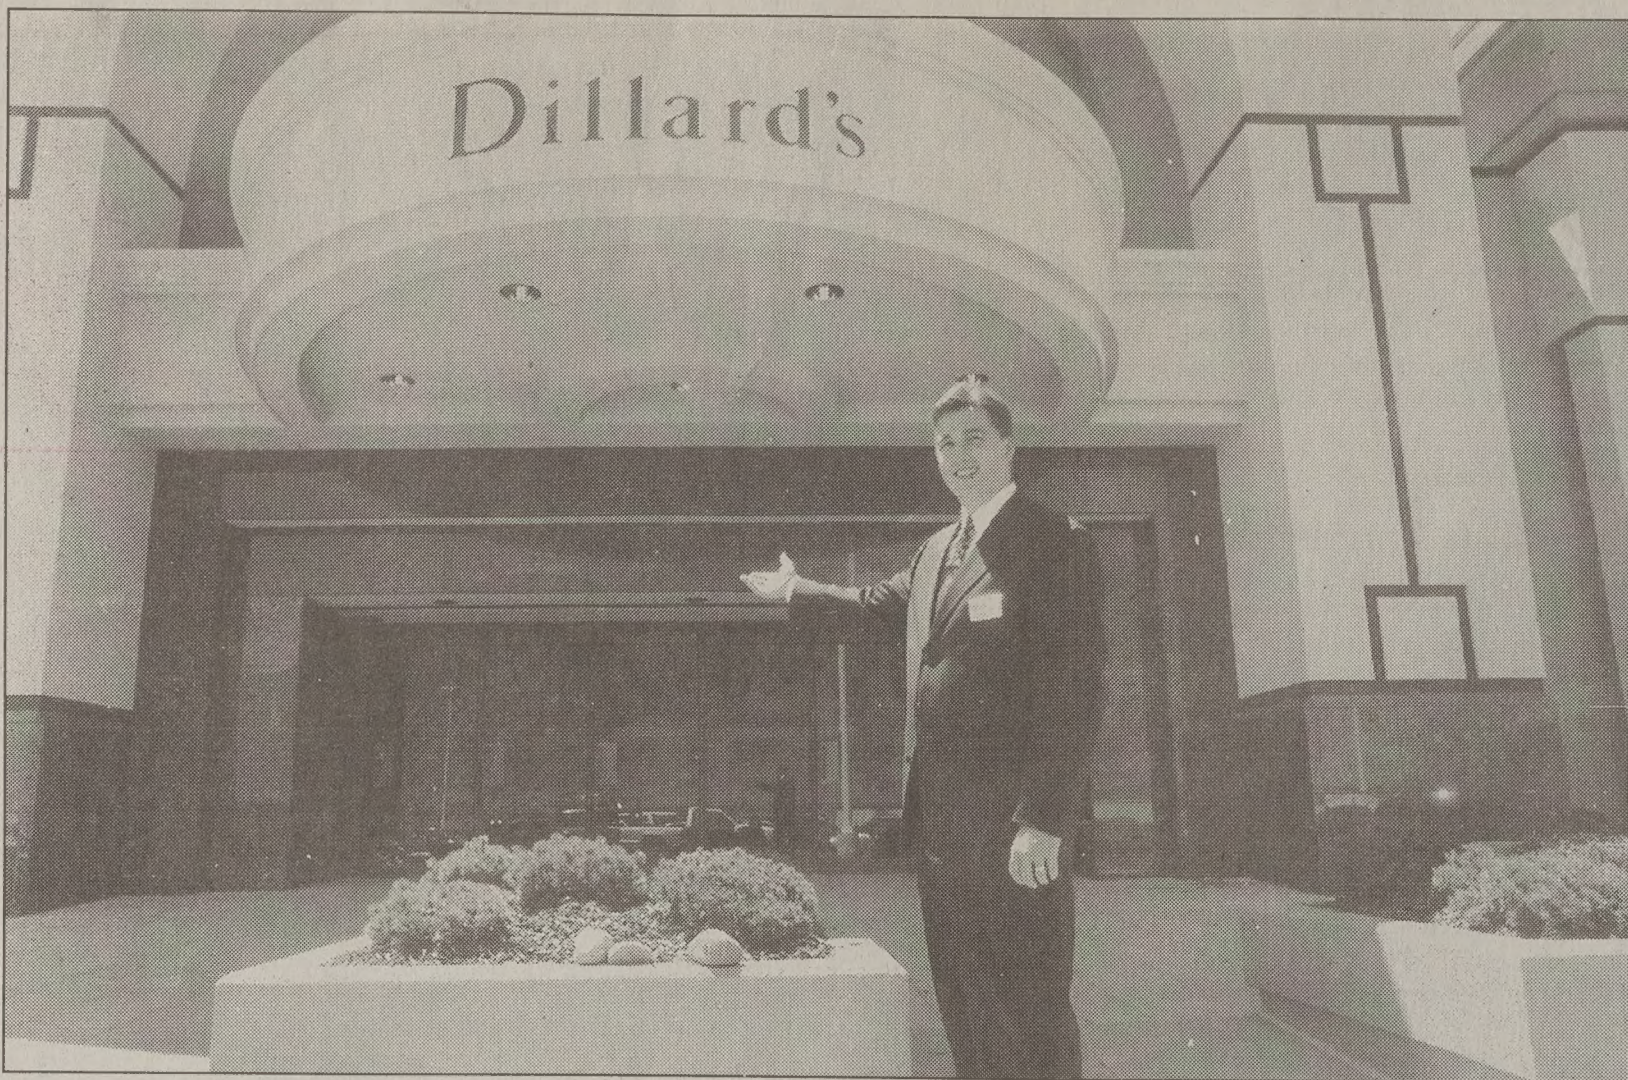

The rest of the Provo Towne Centre is not expected to open until October 28.

Dillard's has interviewed 1,200 people and 250 associates have been hired from the Utah County area, Ptacek said. Only Ptacek and two associates have been transplanted from other stores.

Many applicants were from Utah Valley State College or BYU, and Ptacek estimated that over 25 percent of the associates are students from BYU or UVSC.

"Dillard's pays better than most of the other Utah County jobs, and that comes in handy because I just barely got married," said Jim Mock, a new Dillard's associate and BYU student majoring in family science from Tustan, Calif.

"Some sales are on a tiered sales commission and (associates) can work their way up, such as the mens suit department and the shoe departments," Mock said. "Others are in a sales per hour system in which Dillard's pays more per sale, per hour."

"Dillard's decided to locate in the Provo area when visiting the community. It was a great opportunity for Dillard's," said Robert E. Baker, vice president of advertising for Dillard's. "The values of Dillard's and the values of the community reflect each other, and we had something to offer the community that wasn't already here."

The grand opening of the Provo store is number 275 for the Dillard's chain, which was founded in 1938 by William Dillard.

Dillard is still the acting Chairman of the Board and the Chief Executive Officer of the company.

The new store is two levels high, consists of 200,000 square feet and is about the same size as the Dillard store in the Fashion Place mall in Murray.

Republican health plan idea slammed

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Many employer-sponsored health plans would have to live with new rules, including paying for emergency care in any apparent crisis, under legislation proposed Wednesday by Senate Republican leaders and quickly slammed by the White House.

All Americans would gain the right to receive clear information about their health plans' coverage, plus the chance to take disputes with insurers to an outside arbitrator.

"The challenge ... was to correct some very real problems in our health care system without making health care unaffordable," said Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott wants to bring the legislation to the Senate floor before the end of the month, Nickles said. Democrats and President Clinton are pushing an alternative "patient bill of rights" that would expand many patients' right to sue health plans.

Donna Shalala, the secretary of health and human services, appeared before reporters at the White House Wednesday to offer a stinging criticism of the Republican plan.

"I would describe this as too little and too late," Shalala said.

Later, Clinton participated in a roundtable discussion with doctors, nurses and families who described problems they have encountered with HMOs and who favor a patient's bill of rights.

Clinton heard tragic stories from several people, including a Chicago man whose wife died after her HMO forced her to travel from Hawaii to Chicago for a transplant operation even though doctors who could have done it in Hawaii insisted she was too weak to make the flight.

"It's just obvious the HMO is more interested in saving money than in saving my wife's life," he said.

Clinton said this and other examples of unjustified delays in treatment showed that Congress needs to make it a higher priority to pass a patient's bill of rights this session.

"It's not a political issue, and anybody who has personally experienced it feels the same way," the president said.

Polls indicate that many Americans would support laws to curb health plan cost-containment tactics that restrict patient choices, and Democrats have taken every opportunity to highlight GOP resistance to their legislation.

Generally, the consumer protections Republicans have endorsed would be similar to many that Democrats want. But under the GOP proposal, most of the rules would apply only to federally regulated health plans in which employers directly assume the financial risk for workers' medical care.

About 48 million Americans are covered by such plans, most working for large corporations. Other health plans, under the GOP proposal, would continue to be regulated by state laws, which vary widely in the protections they offer consumers.

Under the GOP plan, the federally regulated plans would be required to pay for emergency room care in situations a prudent person would consider a crisis.

These health plans would also have to let certain patients — including pregnant women and the terminally ill — temporarily keep seeing a doctor whose contract with the plan is terminated during treatment.

If they restrict patients to seeing only certain doctors, the employer-sponsored plans would also have to pay their regular fees to any outside doctor a patient wants to see, if he or she is willing to pick up the price difference.

In addition, they would have to let women see an obstetrician/gynecologist and children a pediatrician without asking the plan for permission.

New rights to appeal a health plan's denial of coverage for treatment costing $1,000 or more, however, would be extended to all Americans, under the Senate Republican plan.

Fires torch Utah

Associated Press

TOOELE — Crews battled to gain control of two fires burning in eastern Utah Wednesday, as officials braced for the full brunt of a potentially punishing fire season.

A fire in Tooele County, just north of the Skull Valley Goshute Indian Reservation, that had burned 20,692 acres was contained Tuesday afternoon and was expected to be controlled by 9 p.m. Wednesday.

The blaze started Monday and was believed to be human caused. It spread quickly among the dry grasses in the area, fanned by high, swirling winds that whipped flames as high as 8 feet and made battling the fire dangerous for crews.

Kathy Jo Pollock, fire manager and officer for the Interagency Fire Center in Salt Lake City, said the amount of dry fuel on the ground is one of the biggest problems facing firefighters will have to face in coming weeks. She said Tuesday's tumbleweeds blowing through the road and under a car caused a fire ignited a spot fire in Utah's desert.

A second fire, burning in the area of Enterprise, Utah, had burned 1,815 acres by Wednesday afternoon. The fire is believed to have been started by a farmer clearing weeds on his property.

It was about 30 percent contained Wednesday.
